A very old Invergordon, fullymatured in refill bourboncasks because slow agingwith a restrained influencefrom the oak is always theideal choice for getting thebest from grain whisky. Atthe nose it's actually quitesubdued, with delicate hintsof vanilla and pepper, and itdoesn't reveal the explosionof flavours that takes placewith the first sip. The taste issweet, juicy, almost syrupyand concentrated, but theinitial thickly honeyed attackis immediately balanced bymint, liquorice and balsamicnotes. The tannins and bitterness from the oak, plusa hint of mustiness, never letthe buttery sweetness become too overpowering.In the finish, the pepperynote grows span and gives ita stimulating touch
