A very old Invergordon, fullymatured in refill bourboncasks because slow agingwith a restrained influencefrom the oak is always theideal choice for getting thebest from grain whisky. Atthe nose it's actually quitesubdued, with delicate hintsof vanilla and pepper, and itdoesn't reveal the explosionof flavours that takes placewith the first sip. Thisinfluence of this cask gaveless vanilla and sweetnessthan expected: while thecrisp sweetness of thecereals is evident, this isn't abuttery and easy sweet grainwhisky. The sweetbackground takes secondplace to the pleasantlybalsamic bitterness ofofficial herbs, mint,liquorice, rhubarb. While nottoo overpowering, this medicinal bitterness (with a nice peppery finish) is quite stimulating and unique.
