For whiskiesthat arematured forthree decades,the traditionaluse of refillbourbon oak is often the bestchoice: thecharacter of thespirit remainsintact, withoutbeingoverwhelmed by the cask,while at thesame timeslowly evolving.This single maltfrom the isle ofJura is delicately fruityand sweet at the nose: vanilla, cream, fragrant cereals, grapes, red apples, bananas. It's incredible how fresh it has remained: sure, there are hints of old wooden furniture, but it remains ethereal and light. At the palate the long maturation shows more, with marked herbal notes (tea and chamomile) and delicate tannins. It's fruity but not sweet: mineral, a bit of beeswax, with apples and grapefruits. While it always remains delicate, towards the end the tannic influence from the cask starts to build up, growing into a note of white pepper.
